

Night of the Mothers

A heart-full chant by Trish Bruxvoort Colligan
Dedicated to all women, for we are all mothers of God.

Three women
Arms full of children and earth bounties for all

Midwinter
Dark and chilly
Voices raised in song to call

We will watch
We will sing
We will midwife the wings
Of the morning
Of the morning

We bring fish,
We bring flour
We bring hope for the hour
Til the light comes
Til the light comes

Hands together
In night vigil
Holding mystery in our wombs

Gazing gently
Eyes longing
Keeping space for love to bloom

We will watch
We will sing
We will midwife the wings
Of the morning
Of the morning

We bring fish,
We bring flour
We bring hope for the hour
Til the light comes
Til the light comes

(Voice of the Mothers liturgically calling out to all the women of the planet)

Will you watch and sing?

Will you watch and sing?

Will you watch and sing?

Will you watch and sing?

(choir of the women with the mothers)

We will watch

We will sing

We will midwife the wings

Of the morning

Of the morning

We bring fish,

We bring flour

We bring hope for the hour

Til the light comes

Til the light comes

Words and Music by Trish Bruxvoort Colligan

© 2006 RainDancerMusic All rights reserved.

www.spirations.com

www.riversvoice.com

Yes! You may use these words for your non-commercial use.

If you do, please honor these words and their creator by leaving them unaltered, and by including copyright information, as well as the author's name and contact information.